City-owned houses on Lester to be demolished

The Lemon Grove City Council, acting as the Redevelopment Agency Monday night, voted to proceed with the demolition of two single family houses on Lester Avenue to construct a parking lot.

Bids had been solicited to sell the two single family homes to anyone who wanted to remove them from the site, thus saving the City the cost of demolition, but no bids were received.

The City received two bids for demolition of the homes, garage, machine shop, the parcel that contains the former Marshall Cabinet Shop and all of the structures that formerly contained Gulf Wood Products and Sam's Garage. The lowest bid, in the amount of $36,592 by the Whillock Corporation, was approved by the Council.

The City also solicited bids for the demolition of the building containing the New Miyako Restaurant which, when removed, will provide walk-through access to the parking lot from Broadway. According to City Staff, the City received "what appears to be a good bid" from Whillock Corporation for its demolition but, the tenants have not been given notice to vacate as of yet, so it will be several months before any demolition of the site can occur.

In other business Monday night, the City council approved the final budget for the fiscal year 1990-91 and recognized Bruce Brackman for 15 years of service with the Lemon Grove Fire Department, serving during that time as a Fire Engineer, Lieutenant and finally Captain.

Hazardous Waste date set

As a result of a great deal of multi-agency planning, East County residents will have a one-day Household Hazardous Waste collection event on September 8 at the Edco Disposal recycling site in Lemon Grove.

Lemon Grove City Staff meeting with County Staff, the City of La Mesa and Edco Disposal have planned the event to run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with the County of San Diego providing the financial and staffing resources necessary. San Diego Recycling will also be on hand to collect recyclable materials at the buy-back center and direct activities.

Staff from Lemon Grove and La Mesa will assist, particularly in the areas of publicizing and providing general information. La Mesa Administrative Analyst Sandy Schultz stated that, in terms of what will be accepted at the Waste Collection, the approach will be very open. "They'll take whatever is brought," she added.

Future plans are being explored by all East County cities, Edco, and County representatives to possibly site a future Hazardous Waste Collection facility in East County as well as individual facilities for each city.

Among the concepts being considered is a mobile collection unit that could rotate between all East County cities on different days of the month. It is estimated that such a mobile unit could be operational as early as January 1, 1991.

Sanchez to replace Jones

Tuesday, June 26th, the Governing Board of the Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community college District formally announced the appointment of Dr. Richard Sanchez as Grossmont College's new president-elect.

Forty-nine year old Sanchez is presently vice president of instruction at College of the Sequoias in Visalia. He will replace the current president of ten years, Dr. Ivan Jones, who plans to retire in August.

The college district's board of trustees chose Sanchez from a pool of six finalists. More than 50 candidates applied for the position. The trustees said they chose Sanchez, not only for his extensive background in education, but his impressive people skills, sound fiscal ability, and especially innovative ideas.

In his letter of application, Sanchez said he would "seek to continually strive to offer credible academic programs and would be committed to encouraging innovative programs." He added, "I have an established knowledge of the role and expectations of a Chief Executive Officer in a multi-campus district and consider myself to be an enthusiastic, innovative, and creative individual who will take risks."

He hopes to begin his position at Grossmont in August or September.

New drunk driving law goes into effect

"Driver's licenses will become an endangered species for drunk drivers starting July 1st," said Lt. Jim Duckworth, Acting Commander of the CHP's El Cajon Area Office. That is the date the state's new "Administrative Per Se" law goes into effect.

Lt. Duckworth said, "This statute gives law enforcement officers the authority to take a driver's license on the spot if the driver refuses to submit to or fails to complete the chemical test; the driver submits to a breath test and the blood alcohol concentration (BAC) is .10 percent or higher; or if the driver submits to a blood or urine test and the officer believes the BAC is .10 percent or higher. This provides an immediate cause and effect of the negative consequences of drinking and driving."

The law--Senate Bill 1623, authored by Senator Bill Lockyer (D-Hayward) and coauthored by Senator John Seymour (R-Anaheim), is new in California, but similar laws are in effect in 27 other states. The results of such laws, according to a study by the Insurance Institute For Highway Safety, have been a nine percent reduction in fatal crashes during high risk DUI periods.

"An officer will seize the driver's license after a chemical test determines that the individual's level of intoxication equals or exceeds the .10 percent threshold," the Commander said. Then, a 45 day temporary permit will be issued. This allows time for an administrative review by the Department of Motor Vehicles and an appeal by the individual if requested.

"What makes this law different," Lt. Duckworth said, "is that it is an administrative action, exclusive of court involvement. The Department of Motor vehicles will swiftly review the action and remove the driving privilege from those drivers who were under the influence (the Admin. Per Se Law now specifies .10 percent BAC to be the presumptive level, but cleanup legislation is in the works to change to the .08 percent that became law January 1, 1990)."

"Last year, we arrested 3,447 people in the El Cajon Area for driving under the influence," Lt. Duckworth said. After July 1st, virtually all of those arrested for DUI will have their licenses suspended. We believe this additional tool in our DUI fighting arsenal will enhance our main goal which is to improve the safety on California's highways.

Special Alzheimer's program

A new health care program has been implemented at Mount Miguel Covenant Village, a continuing care retirement community in Spring Valley, owned by the Evangelical Covenant Church.

The program provides special care and services for residents who have a diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease or other related brain demen-tias, according to Ingrid Kleven, administrator of the Mount Miguel Health Facility.

These residents have very special needs, Ms. Kleven pointed out. Therefore, a separate "specialized care program" has been initiated--a multifaceted program structured to meet those precise needs.

A designated area of the Mount Miguel Health Facility is dedicated to serving these residents. It is now equipped to serve 24 residents, and will soon increase the capacity to 32 residents.

A separate activities program has been developed to meet these resi-dents' special needs, Ms. Kleven said. "Careful consideration has been given to exactly what activities are most beneficial to these residents. And staff is receiving special training to be most effective in their assigned functions."

The Health Facility's dietary department has implemented new mea-sures to address concerns regarding weight loss due to the need for these residents to continually move about, Ms. Kleven added. "We are also developing a beautiful park area with walkways to provide an additional outside area for these residents to safely walk."

The new program also recognized that Alzheimer's disease and other dementias not only effect the resident but their families as well. A family Support Group has been organized and now serves as a very positive element in the overall program. The first meeting was held in May.

"The new Specialized Care Program is structured to help these very special residents in every aspect of their lives," Ms. Kleven said. "This service is provided in a positive, individualized manner, within the framework of Christian love and compassion."

Mount Miguel Covenant Village, located at 325 Kempton Street in Spring Valley, is operated by Covenant Retirement Communities.

Elizabeth Lemon's "Pilot" Pete Smith guides her through the crowds at the Del Mar Fair. Assisting were Paul McCormick, Bill Ware, Sylvia Williams, Ann Lazok and Brenda Lazok. The heat was almost overwhelming inside the lemon, as the driver sits just forward of the engine and the ventilation is marginal.

Miss Lemon Grove Wendy Bailey and Miss Spring Valley Linh Damell smile for the camera as they get ready to pedal in the daily parade.

Erica Aldrich, Wendy Bailey, Gary Uirici, Jan Davis, Ann Lazok and Brenda Lazok were part of the Lemon Grove contingent at the luncheon given by the Fair to honor the City of Lemon Grove (and Spring Valley).

Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce President Kevin Smith listens as Miss Lemon Grove, Miss Spring Valley and Miss La Mesa Jervan Marino, who is the 1990 Fairest of the Fair, tell of their adventures at the Fair.

Art In All Media

In the Art in All Media competition, in which judging included both two and three dimensional artworks for both teens and adults award winners included Junior High School Student Sierra Bannon of La Mesa for work in oils and Mt Miguel students Jennifer McEwen and Dan Springer for miscellaneous crafts and oils respectively.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

Not unlike the animated cartoon character, Bart Simpson, George Bush's end of semester report would have to label him as "Under-Achiever." Wrapped almost shamelessly in the flag for the past six months, he has waffled, floundered and generally allowed events to carry him. Let's look at the grades:

Finance: The major financial issues of the nation appear unchanged. No plan is yet afoot for assailing the mountainous deficit. The figure for the savings and loan bailout has reached $132 billion and rising. The overall economy seems to be faltering with the smell of recession in the air. A ray of sunshine (although hardly viewed as such by the conservative right) lies in the President finally acknowledging in writing, since his lips could not form the words, that taxes may after all be necessary to engender some much needed revenue. As Congress and the President remain locked in budgetary debate, the need for dramatic and creative executive leadership has never been more evident. Finance Grade: D+

Environment: The lengthy moratorium granted on coastal oil drilling is a most welcome move. Snarled at by the oil industry as fatal to their purposes, and greeted tepidly by environmentalists as "not enough," it nevertheless represents a temporary triumph of human concern over "business as usual." Environment Grade: B+

Domestic Affairs: "Kinder and Gentler" seems nowhere in evidence within the Bush administration. Despite its overwhelming passage in congress, the President has vetoed the Parental Leave Bill, the most compassionate piece of legislation in some time. After a brief and daring effort at supporting an unrestricted NEA, Mr. Bush has waffled and then fallen into a deep uneasy silence as the spectre of censorship rises all around us. Finally, despite two successive Supreme Court rulings, the President continues his attempt to ride the flag-burning issue into the November elections where he undoubtedly hopes to wield it against those in congress who thwarted him. Domestic Affairs Grade: D

Foreign Affairs: This is a tricky area to evaluate, since affairs beyond our borders are also frequently beyond our control. The summit was a grand show with little substantial outcome, but summits usually go that route anyway. Results in the Middle East are disappointing but then results in the Middle East are usually disappointing. Our aid to the new governments in both Panama and Nicaragua has been slow and inadequate. Our international ties have been basically maintained, but there is an overriding feeling in the air that the changes in Europe and elsewhere offer great opportunities for American statesmanship which we have yet to seize upon. The proposal of a new open trade policy toward Latin America, if seriously intended, is promising and could provide a trade and investment boost for this hemisphere. Foreign Affairs Grade: B

Overall Grade Point Average: 2.7 C+

Polls around the nation reflect an increasing apathy and loss of confidence in our nation's leadership. We find more to admire apparently in the Gorbachevs and Mandelas than in our own elected officials. Mediocrity is not enough. In Bart Simpson it may be amusing, but in our elected leadership it is not.

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

The hand-written invitation read "You are cordially invited to the first annual Bar-B-Que Bash on the shores of Dan's Lake from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. on Saturday June 9th in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and ninety."

We accepted our son's invitation and arrived at the prescribed time. The Bar-B-Que was a boar. I'm not implying that the host or hostess were bores, but to the meat charring on the outdoor spit. It seems that Dan, a modern day Robin Hood, zeroed in on a couple wild pigs with his trusty bow and arrow. The "Great White Hunter" makes a yearly trip to the Oregon border and usually brings back the bacon.

Before the "Come and Get It" alarm was sounded, we all took a turn at fishing in Dan's lake. His claim that he had the murky waters well-stocked with some exotic species such as cat and mosquito fish enticed us to dip a worm.

It was at this point of the gala fiesta that I was introduced to David Rodriguez, formerly known as "Cub" in his younger days. What a guy! He could handle the rod like a miniature Isaac Walton with his younger sister, Nickie by his side - catering to his every fishing need like a surgeon's competent nurse.

Dan's Bar-B-Que

What a pair!

During a lull in the ferocious, unrelenting attacks of the fish on our baited lines, I got to know the "Cub" a little better. It was hard to believe that this guy was our Dannie Boy's grandson and for him to call Dan, Grandpa was unbelievable. Little David, Cub, was only 6 years old, going on 20, and his cute little sister was 3, but just going on.

After just a short, uneventful hour of fishing, and not even a nibble, Dan admitted he had his fish spoiled by feeding them too much, and with that he and Cub sprinkled a large can full of fish delicacies on the still waters.

Emma, our daughter-in-law, signaled that the "soup was on," so we all struggled up to the picnic table - worn out from our hectic "Day on the Dock".

A scrumptious meal was served with wild pork ribs, tame chicken legs and all the traditional bar-b-que trimmings. I not only filled my stomach with food but I also filled my heart by adding a most lovable pair, Cub and his sister, to my list of friends.

I figured out later that these two little people and I were somehow related in a very long shirttail way, but too many in-laws and out-laws to try to explain.

"Cobb had another side, also"

Lee Blessing's heralded play, "Cobb" which opened at the Old Globe Theatre on June 28th, revived many memories for 93-year-old La Mesa resident Allen Conkwright. Conkwright was a teammate of Ty Cobb on the 1920 Detroit Tigers.

Conkwright's connection to Cobb was recently uncovered by former San Diegan James Smith, who interviewed Conkwright as a research project for the San Diego Hall of Champions.

While the play mainly focused on the ruthless, competitive spirit which drove Cobb to the peak of baseball immortality, Conkwright was able to offer another but less visible aspect to Cobb's character.

The Detroit Tigers purchased pitcher Conkwright's contract from Bloomington of the "Three I League" in 1920. He still has a copy of that contract which paid him a salary of $400 per month. The Tigers had a policy of assigning players lockers in alphabetical order which placed Conkwright next to Cobb and resulted in closer contact than a rookie would normally have with the grizzled veteran star.

Was Ty Cobb really the vicious, tortured, dank character he is so often made out to be? "I have read and heard so much of that" says Conkwright, "but don't believe all of it. There was another side to the man which was not openly apparent. High standards of excellence, aggressiveness and a driven desire to win and succeed at any cost were definitely Cobb trademarks. On the other hand, he was always decent, supportive and always encouraging to me in my efforts. More so than a rookie had a right to expect in those days," stated Conkwright.

Conkwright's promising career as a pitcher with the Tigers was cut short by a rib injury suffered in a collision with his third baseman. In spring training of 1921, the season Ty Cobb took over the reins as manager of the Tigers, Conkwright worked on developing a screwball to compensate for problems caused by the rib injury. This caused further problems to his arm and he lost his effectiveness. He was sent back to Rochester to recuperate, but his arm never recovered its former strength, and the promise of a bright future with the Tigers was shattered. After baseball, he moved to Long Beach where he worked for Texaco for over 36 years.

Today, Conkwright follows his favorite teams, the Padres and Dodgers, regularly on TV and radio. He ventures monthly from his La Mesa California Care Center via wheelchair to watch the Padres at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges Gettin' Even Easy

Let's get the heat off Jack McKeon for being a decent, clean cut, All-American kind of guy. His job is tough enough without adding duties as a fight promoter in the ring of revenge.

McKeon has been getting a short shift from blood thirsty fans who insist he should have turned an early June game against San Francisco into the Pearl Harbor of a bean-ball war. That's not McKeon's job. Not with million dollar players, it isn't.

Remember the scenario? As fate would have it, McKeon had given his All-Star vote leading catcher Benito Santiago the game off. However when down by a run with two out in the seventh inning and a man on second, McKeon called on the (then) .317 hitting Santiago to pinch hit.

Giant pitcher Jeff Brantley quickly got ahead of Benny to move the count to 0-balls, 2-strikes. The book calls for a waste pitch with a count like that. Managers have benched, fined and fought with pitchers, who give up hits on an 0-2 pitch. Instead of going outside with a nibbler, Brantley came inside with a fastball.

It was a "purpose pitch," and not at all surprising. Santiago leans out over the plate in his stance and Brantley was apparently trying to move Benny back off the plate. That's baseball. Players understand that.

Brantley's pitch came in too high and too far inside. Santiago reacted by throwing his left arm up to ward off the ball. Players said they could hear the crack of his bone all the way over on the bench.

Santiago tried to stay in the game, going to first after being hit. But even for a warrior like Santiago, the hurt was too heavy and utility man Joey Cora went in to pinch run. The Padres lost the game 6-2 and have been on a down slide ever since. There were no "getting even" pitches from the Padre staff and a vocal cadre of local noncombatants are put out that no Giant blood has been spilled.

There are no winners in bean-ball wars. At best, the scrap after such an incident results in anything from pulled muscles, bumps and bruises to more serious, and even disabling injuries.

In the "old days," pitchers like Sal "The Barber" Maglie would knock a batter down 4-times, just to give him an intentional pass. But players were only worth about $50,000 then.

Players these days represent a much bigger financial investment and the league has established rules forbidding any action that could result in injury. Manager's orders included.

You may not like it, but it's sound business. There are still pitchers who hit opposing batters in retaliation, but sane management demands you don't place million dollar players in jeopardy.

Individual players have their own ways of getting even. One of the smartest was former Los Angeles catcher John Roseboro.

In a game played back in the late 50's Roseboro went to first after being hit. He bunted down the first base line on his next at bat and, as the pitcher came over to field the ball, Roseboro (a former high school football linebacker) ran all over him, then trotted to the club house, knowing he was out of the game.

That's player-to-player retaliation. A satisfying, you and me, get it on and get it over, steam venting. No orders needed.

It's The Law

by Dennis L. Polito

My husband and I own our home as joint tenants. Is this advisable?

Of course, the example assumes that the Greens did not make improvements to their home (which would increase their basis). It also assumes that Mrs. Green did not "rollover" her gain into a more expensive home and did not use her one-time exclusion of $125,000 from gross income on the sale of their principal residence (available to persons age 55 or older with certain restrictions). If Mrs. Green purchased a more expensive home within specified time limits or utilized her $125,000 one-time exclusion, the adverse income tax results will be deferred (but not forgotten) until a later date.

Moreover, if the Greens take title as "community property," the probate of the deceased spouse's estate may not be necessary. If one spouse leaves his or her property to the other spouse, the survivor may choose among the following alternatives:

- probate of all community property assets;
- probate of the decedent's half of community property assets; or
- no probate administration

The last alternative, while avoiding the publicity and expense associated with probate, will leave the survivor personally liable for any debts of the deceased spouse which are chargeable against community property. Probate proceedings offer protection to assets since creditors are given only four months to file claims with the court and, if no claim is made, the estate is not obligated to pay the debt. If creditors will not be a problem, there may be no reason to elect probate.

Similarly, if the Greens take title as "joint tenants," probate is not required in order to place title in the name of the surviving spouse, but the survivor may choose to probate the property to cut off the claims of creditors. Probate is therefore not based on "community property" or "joint tenancy" title, but may be based on a desire to terminate the rights of creditors. For the above reasons, it is generally advisable for couples to own their homes as "community property" rather than as "joint tenants."

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: Days of Thunder

I had always heard about deja vu, but I never experienced it until a few days ago. You see, I was watching this stirring movie about a brash young hot dog, the top in his field, with a love for speed and recklessness. Of course his lack of responsibility makes his superiors resent him, but he soon wins their affections and even learns to calm down a little. Then our hero is struck by personal tragedy, a huge accident which puts one of his buddies out of commission. Dwelling in the pits of depression, he is sure he'll never return to his former life. But, miracle of miracles, with a kiss from a pretty girl and a pat on the rear from the boss, he leaps back in the saddle not a half hour later. Triumphant once again, our hero smiles for the camera as electric guitars wail the mighty theme of the victorious.

Sounds a lot like "Top Gun" doesn't it? Well it's really Tom Cruise's "new" movie, "Days of Thunder," and although I seem to be coming down on it with my usual cynicism, I must tell you...it's actually rather enjoyable. That is, if you're able to look beyond the fact that it's basically "Top Gun" on a racetrack.

The screenplay by Robert Towne, (from a story by Towne and Cruise), is, as I mentioned before, simplistic. However, director Tony Scott keeps the story moving at a brisk pace and includes enough action to keep most audiences satisfied. The racing sequences were filmed during the actual Daytona 500, adding a sense of realism to the film, which also boasts some incredible stunt work.

Tom Cruise gives a fine performance, although nowhere near the caliber of his past few films, and he is surrounded by an excellent supporting cast including Randy Quaid, Cary Elwes and Robert Duvall. Duvall's is the film's best performance, as he adds another memorable character to his repertoire. If nothing else, see "Days of Thunder" to enjoy his brilliance.

If you go into "Thunder" with the right attitude, prepared for thoughtless escapism, you should enjoy it as I did. Despite the fact that the film reduces Cruise to nothing but a formula star, it ranks with the best of this summer's fare.

Romeo and Juliet, by-the-lake

Every summer for the past ten years Octad-One Productions has presented Shakespearian comedies in the outdoor amphitheatre at the East County Performing Arts Center in El Cajon. This year the production will be the romantic tragedy, "Romeo and Juliet," the ancient story of innocent young lovers doomed by the senseless feuding of their respective families.

Martin Gerrish is directing the drama and appearing as the romantic pair are Alexandra Auckland as the lovely Juliet and Morgan Brown as the ardent Romeo. Others in the cast include: Jan Hopf as The Nurse, Bruce Erricson as The Friar, Don Pugh as Mercutio, Nick Peters as Tybalt, James Gary Boyd and Michele A. Guisti as Lord and Lady Capulet and William S. Farnum and Tess Germain as Lord and Lady Montague.

The attendance at Octad's Shakespeare-by-the-Lake has increased to such an extent that a Saturday performance has been added to the regular Sunday show. Opening night is July 7th and performances will continue every weekend through August 26th. Curtain time will be at 6:30 p.m. this year.

Admission is free, however, donations are gratefully accepted. For information call 466-3987.

Mission to celebrate Festival of the Bells

The weekend of July 13, 14, and 15, 1990 will be a time for joy and celebration as Mission San Diego de Alcala, California's oldest church, commemorates its 221st Birthday with the annual Festival Of The Bells staged over the entire weekend on the hallowed grounds of the Old Mission.

Friday, July 13, the Fiesta will run from 6:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. The evening's activities and entertainment will include a disc jockey playing dance music, and a local talent show with some surprise quests. Plans are being made for the enjoyment of all ages in a family-style atmosphere.

Saturday, July 14, the Fiesta will run from 12:00 noon to 10:30 p.m., with festivities beginning with the colorful procession following the Angelus and the Blessing Of The Bells to be led by the pastor of the church, Monsignor I. Brent Eagen. Visitors are urged to bring bells to the Fiesta to have them blessed and ring out with the Mission bells during the Angelus. Throughout the day on Saturday, the lush garden areas of the Parish will be alive with music, good food, games for all visitors, and a "white elephant" sale. A pit-roasted barbecue, hot dogs, nachos, and Spanish Paella, to name a few, will be served for lunch and dinner, and a Sweet Kitchen will be open to top off the meals.

Sunday, July 15, the Fiesta will begin with a pancake breakfast running from 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. The rest of the activities will run from 10:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. The highlight of the day will be the Blessing Of The Animals, beginning at 3:00 p.m. This event was first begun by St. Francis and continues to this day. Closing ceremonies on Sunday will include a grand prize drawing at 8:00 p.m. - one need not be present to win.

All proceeds from the Festival Of The Bells will be used to benefit the historical Mission's restoration program. The public is most welcome to attend.

Charity run

The Lemon Grove Mail Boxes Etc. helped raise $30,000 for the Leukemia Society at the first-annual Mail Boxes Etc. 12-hour relay on Saturday, June 23rd.

Runners in teams of 10 ran over a two-mile course on a rotating basis for 12 consecutive hours. A total of 1,548 miles was completed by the 300 runners who participated in the event.

There are 52 Mail Boxes Etc. stores throughout San Diego County with the local store located at 7046 Broadway in Lemon Grove Plaza owned by Susan Benedetto.

Property sold

Raymond and Judith Prout of Bonsall have purchased a 5,100-square-foot retail center located at 7608 Broadway Street in Lemon Grove, for $715,000 according to Coldwell Banker Commercial Real Estate Service.

The property was purchased as an investment and includes tenants such as: Napa Auto Parts and Econo-Lube.

Selling the property was Buena Vista Development, with Dick Bridy and James Marks as general partners.

Vern Marston retires

Vern Marston (left) received a fishing pole and a silver wine goblet at the combination Chamber of Commerce Sundowner and retirement farewell at Union Bank Wednesday, June 27.

Now that Vern is about to become a man of leisure he says, "We're just going to take it easy for a while. We've got a big family reunion coming up and then my wife and I (DelRey) are going to Germany in August." He says his new fishing pole will come in handy and he plans to "make good use of it."

Ron Skillman, who transferred to Lemon Grove from Union Bank's Pacific Beach branch, will be following in Vern's footsteps as the new branch manager.

Local National 9 Inn promoting new image

Cleaning up Lemon Grove and focusing on redevelopment have made a lot of changes in the City and, in keeping with these efforts, the National 9 Inn at 8429 Broadway, has embarked on an extensive remodeling plan and promotion campaign.

"A year ago," said Marketing Consultant Dennis O'Brien, "this place was full of undesirables. We have new management now, and they've really cleaned up the place. Our occupancy has dropped, but the quality has definitely gone up."

He said the owner, John Neill, has "made a real commitment to turn the place around and it's a different game now."

There are 62 units at the National 9 Inn, most of them recently remodeled, and each one is equipped with a kitchenette and queen-size bed. "They're like budget suites," said O'Brien. The motel will provide cooking utensils to guests and, in the future, each room will have a microwave. Non-smoking rooms are also available.

"The family is our market," he said, "We provide a nice quiet place to stay without spending a lot of money." Rooms are $45 per night and kids stay for free at the National 9. The motel grounds boast a swimming pool, as well as a guest laundromat.

Another aspect of the National 9 that is attractive to families is its current promotional campaign. Guests who stay at the motel for a minimum of two nights receive two free tickets to the Zoo or two half-priced Sea World tickets.

The National 9's commitment to family extends to those in need as well. The motel has donated a room to Children's Hospital for families in a crisis situation who could not otherwise afford a lengthy stay in a motel.

People traveling for business instead of pleasure will also appreciate the National 9. The kitchenettes allow a break from dining in restaurants constantly and the motel provides fax and copying services on site.

O'Brien said the changes at the National 9 are extensive and, "This has been a real challenge for me personally. I feel good about how things have really changed."

Xeriscape gardening promoted to group of visiting East County officials

by Paul Treske

"It's more appropriate to bring plants from Arizona and New Mexico into our hot valleys than to landscape as we now do." These challenging words by Tom Ash of Western Municipal Water District were the keynote in a visit by East County officials to Western's "Landscapes, Southern California Style," experimental xeriscape garden in Riverside last Friday. Officials and staff from La Mesa, Lemon Grove and El Cajon, together with members of the Helix Water District and press, visited the specialized garden project to get a first-hand look at methods of Southern California landscaping suited to the current long-term drought situation.

Using comparative figures, Ash told the visitors that, while a golf course in Palm Springs uses seven acre-feet of water for each acre of land per year, and a garden in Orange County uses three to four acre-feet, the "Landscapes Southern California Style" garden currently uses only 2.2 acre-feet per acre per year and that may eventually be reduced to 1.5 acre-feet. "We need more skill in landscaping," said Ash. "We can no longer count on merely turf and a birch tree anymore." He added that, although landscapers are becoming interested in more varied reduced-water plantings, developers themselves remain "the hardest people to get to."

The garden itself contains both permanently planted areas and sections demonstrating step-by-step processes. Colorful blue Cleveland sage, holly-like Oregon grape, Texas Ranger and bushy senna offer lacy, subtle colors under honey locust and golden-rain trees, while a variety of groundcovers such as a myoporum and wild strawberry mix with carpets of tree mulch. The aura created is one of light airiness and ease of care.

Noting that San Diegans are heavily committed to their water-needy ornamental and fruit trees, Helix Water District President Harold Ball urged treasuring them, but recommended the incorporation of drip irrigation methods as both more efficient and water saving.

Among those making the visit in addition to Ball were Water District Board and staff members: George Martin, Shirley Massie, Don Kaiser, Bob Friedgen, Don Gauthier, Nat Egert, Lillian Childs, Don Kuhl and Warren Buckner.

Among the Lemon Grove delegation were Community Development Director Jim Butler, Public Works Superintendent Tim Fleming, and staff members David McKay and Karen MacConnell.

He is an aircraft armament systems technician with the 81st Aircraft Generation Squadron.

Willis is the son of Fred C. and Margarita I. Willis of Lemon Grove.

His wife, Leann, is the daughter of David R. and Mary Nunez of Alamogordo, New Mexico.

The sergeant is a 1980 graduate of Mount Miguel High School.

Among those participating are:

The North Georgia mountains are the setting for adventure as Pauline Fletcher of La Mesa goes spelunking, rappelling, white water rafting and biking during "Southern Skylines and Mountainsides."

During a 184.5 mile trek through the Chesapeake area, Christine Brown of La Mesa will enjoy biking, comping and caving during "Pedal Pushers 1990."

Melissa Block of Spring Valley will travel to Dayton, Ohio--the home of the Wright Brothers--where she will explore aviation technology and careers during "Blast-Off! An Aerospace Challenge."
